

The target of the graduate work is to try to find a value of sustainable development in community projects. The work is based on local and foreign literature, technical articles and discussion with members of selected community projects. Graduate work defines terms community, community work and sustainable development, furthermore is trying to find a connection between those terms and their mutual importance. It also describes a connection of a sustainable development with social work itself and how this could be useful for society. Graduate work develops the idea of sustainability in terms such as participation and empowerment and which we can find in community projects. In the practical part is work dedicated to selected community projects which chose sustainable development as one of their main target and tries to find principles of sustainable development in practice.
