

My bachelor thesis deals with the problem of new poverty. Firstly I try to analyze and describe this social problem of contemporary (postmodern) society in general. I then proceed to raise a hypothetical question whether there is a correlation between the described theory and real life - the real life (practical part) is represented by users of homeless shelter named Speramus which is located in Liberec. Finally I answer the hypothetical question, which is the goal of my bachelor thesis too.