

Abstract (En)

The presented thesis analyses the (international) organized crime from the point of view of the criminal law and also with the respect to the international cooperation in the field of fighting against organized crime. The thesis describes also the roots of the international organized crime including Its penetrating into the social live and Its progress in the Czech republic. The thesis adverts also preventive and repressive instruments used by the governments in their fight against organized crime. The integral part of the text are actual statistical data too.