

Abstract

The aim of this thesis is the comparison of the genesis of student movement in France and in the Federal Republic of Germany in the sixties of the twentieth century. The first part deals comprehensively with the formation of the student movement in France. From the initial situation and impulses that led students to launch manifests through the associated mobilization. The chapter also describes the most important ideological concept of the student movement, objectives and characteristics the main protagonist. The following section analyze the formation of student movements in the Federal Republic of Germany. World events and the specific situation in the country, which led to the rise of student movements. The initial inspiration for the formation of the main ideas of the movement, as well as subsequent goals. The actual comparison of the genesis of student movements in the two countries focuses on the third part. The essence of this chapter is to compare the different and common features in the development of student movements. Including a comparison of the causes of movement in the global context with regard to specific internal political situation in the country and compared to the basic ideas of movement and character of their leaders. The bachelor thesis is supplemented with attachments, which provide additional information and historical photographs.