

Abstract

The objective of thesis „Regional differences in sectoral composition of Local Action Groups in Czechia“ is to provide a survey of sectoral composition of each Local Action Group, to find if there are differences in the composition and what impact has the composition on type of realized projects within LAGs. The other objective is evaluation of LAG's webpage user-friendliness. The theoretical part deals with the definition of rural areas and with introduction of national „Program rozvoje venkova“, Programme LEADER and terms as Local Action Group, National Network of Local Action Group. The practical part investigates set objectives with cartographical tools, webpages are analyzed with internet research as well as Local Action Groups.

Key words: rural development, local action group, Programme LEADER, sectoral composition of LAG