

In this master's thesis I deal with the theories of social counseling. Social rehabilitation and needs are defined here and I focus on some kinds of disability. I identify and describe the sociology of disability, the concept of health and disease. Furthermore, I describe the counseling process connected to the social work - conditions, methods and techniques of social counseling, including the legislation in social assistance. I deal with the counseling as a part of system of a complex rehabilitation with a focus on vocational rehabilitation for people with disabilities. I point out the importance of working for the social use of a man with a disability or a handicap.

In the second part of the master's thesis I make description and analysis of counseling and the social rehabilitation of the region Tábořsko. I describe programs and proposals for systemic changes. Using a questionnaire survey (the respondents of three non-state non-profit organizations were asked) I realize how extensively sufficient and expert is the social counseling in Tábořsko and from which sources a person with disability can benefit. I find out how sufficient is the social rehabilitation focused on the effectiveness of vocational rehabilitation and employability of these persons in the labor market. Further I analyze the factors which constrain the disabled people in this market.

In the next section, through tables and graphs, I show up my research and my final evaluation.
