

Abstract

Today's forensic anthropology is facing a problem in the form of globalization and frequent relocation of people whether in the purpose of tourism and business or because of war conflicts and natural catastrophes. The aim of this bachelor's thesis is to introduce the methods used for estimation of biological profile of a person and to validate their coping with population specificity and secular trend.