

The goal of my thesis is to summarize the most important facts about morality, morality development and its connection to gender issues. I am debating, whether there is some kind of inborn conscience and if there are objective ethical norms. In the next part, I briefly summarize three theories of development, which are connected to morality or primarily focused on it. The next part is introduction to gender issues, gender stereotypes and socialization influence on gender identity development in children. In the practical part I present my own moral and gender oriented experiment which was conducted in Christian youth group and its results. In the discussion I present my own view of this problem, based on the information mentioned above and I present possible interpretations of my experiment
