

Abstract:

Bachelor thesis is focused on presenting chosen (model and didactically useful) animal species, which are by different ways linked to human habitations and their closest area. Explained are the principles of the animal domestication, including historical aspects and synanthropy. Examples of species of both groups are presented (especially with light for usefulness or conversely harmfulness for humans). For completeness are also mentioned examples of intentionally kept animals (pets) and their meaning.

Key words:

Domestication, history, pets, synanthropic species
