This work studies the phenomenon of sound recognition through spiking neuron network synchronization. The input layer res on specifi c features in the input sound, which resemble syllable. The neurons in the middle layer are interconnected in such a way that they prolong their ring rates if the ring frequence is similar. This causes the ring of the output neuron of the corresponding pattern.