

Development and the current status of legal regulation of mercenaries

This thesis deals with the issue of mercenary warfare, evolution of the term mercenary, and the position of mercenaries within the international law. It contains analysis of key international conventions, customary international law and analysis of selected cases. It reviews the evolution of the legislation until present time and provides possibilities for the future. Activities of private military companies and options for their regulation are covered in lesser extent.