

The title of my graduation thesis is Příbram as a destination of geologic walks. Altogether, it surveys five geologically interesting areas. It's main contribution is that it can be used as a material of which work projects for students can be made. The purpose of these work projects is to activate the students who take geologic excursions. Further, my thesis contains a manual for teachers. This manual is concerned with specific areas and it consists of both theoretical and practical information. The manual is based on simple instructions that can help teachers to orientate quickly in each area's specific questions.