

Abstract

This thesis deals with the issue of selling goods in shops, thus the issue of consumer purchase contracts, which everyone of us concludes every day. The content of this thesis is divided into six chapters whose aim is to characterize current legislation of consumer purchase contracts in details and it deals primarily with rights and obligations of sellers – businessman and buyers - consumers. Part of this thesis deals with alternative consumers dispute resolution

The first chapter focuses on general analysis of legislation which deals with sell of goods in shop. This chapter systematically includes the issue of consumer purchase contracts to current private law legislation and mentions the legislation of the European Union. In this chapter the author also defines the legal terms as sell of goods in shop, consumer, businessman, goods. Finally in this chapter is mentioned unusual discharge with consumer purchase contract.

In the second chapter is because of clarity of this thesis mentioned general legislation of purchase contract, when the author describes requisites of purchase contract. Mainly essential requirements as item of purchase and purchase price. Further in this chapter the author describes rights and obligations of purchase contract parties.

The third chapter named as transfer of ownership when selling goods in shop. It summarizes delivery and acceptance of goods and defines exceptions from general principle as in self-service sale. This chapter also mentions transfer of risk of damage which goes with the transfer of ownership.

The next – fourth chapter deals with the seller's responsibility for defects. The author characterizes statutory requirements of perfection of the goods. The author also deals with presumption of defectiveness when he in details analysis the types of defects and vesting period in which this presumption is used. The author also focuses on the legislation of quality guarantee.

The fifth chapter of this thesis focus on the rights of the buyer of defective performance. The author primarily mentions general legislation of purchase contracts and he analyzes this topic related to the consumer purchase contract. The author describes also disclaimers, the rights of buyers while buying used goods and the whole process of complaint.

The last sixth chapter provides readers with insight into alternative consumers dispute resolution and the proceedings. The author also mentions new platform in European Union which deals with the alternative disputes resolution within member states of the European Union.

In conclusion, the author summarizes findings and evaluates problems which comes with the consumer purchase contract with regard to current legislation.