

This thesis deals with advocacy and content of the concept of advocacy, then elaborates the concepts of legal aid and legal service and looking for differences between these concepts. Thesis also offers a brief glimpse into the history of the legal profession and its evolution over the time.

Furthermore, this thesis deals with the influence of the Czech Bar Association as an autonomous professional organization for practicing the legal profession and the provision of legal services by lawyers. Firstly, examines the Czech Bar Association and its organization and its jurisdiction and issuing professional rules. It also deals with other situations, which can occur under the influence of the Czech Bar Association.

The thesis also outlines the basic elements of creation, content and termination of the relationship between the lawyer and his client. Individual elements of the content of the relationship attorney - client are analyzed in the fourth chapter. In particular, the duty of the lawyer to promote the rights and legitimate interests of the client's obligation not to lower the dignity of the legal profession, confidentiality, duty to inform the client and keep the documentation to be insured or the right of a lawyer to remuneration. Similarly thesis deals with the rights and obligations of the client.

Thesis also intends shortly to resolve some common and different elements of the relationship between lawyer and client, which can be seen in the context of criminal proceedings. Thesis in this chapter puts emphasis on the comparison of certain aspects of civil and criminal proceedings.

A certain part of this thesis is the chapter that deals with the responsibilities of a lawyer. It describes both elements of Lawyer's Liability for damage, and also the responsibility of the lawyer in the disciplinary proceedings.

Some attention is focused also in advertising, which the lawyer may use. With the associated ethical issues that permeate virtually the entire performance lawyer profession.

The thesis tries to summarize the most important aspects of the relationship between lawyer and client, but also some other aspects that relate to legal practice.