

The thesis aims to analyze passive forms of selected German verbs; focusing on experiencer and cognitive verbs. The use of selected lexemes is compared considering the question of “agentivity” by experiencer verbs. First, the issue is analyzed and commented with regard to selected codifications. By means of corpus analysis is examined if the current state of language use corresponds with the codification and also what is the motivation for the use of varieties.