

Main topic of this diploma thesis is a creation of conception of volunteerism in the section Streetwork, which provides services of tertiary prevention for drug consumers, field programs.

First section deals generally with the phenomena of volunteerism in Czech Republic. There are briefly described history, motives for volunteer work and legislative framework. This part of work is in detail focused on possibilities and conditions of accreditation. In the end of this section, there is mentioned a theoretical basis of supervision of volunteers.

Second section called “Terénní programy” provides a view of services, which volunteers in the particular organization perform. We can find here general information about field work but also a detailed description of services in the organization.

Third section is devoted to the creation of volunteer conception in the section Streetwork in the particular organization. Chapters 1 – 3 are focused on a gradual specification of the work target, used methods, i.e. on the enquiry of opinions on volunteerism in the whole organization, and diagnostic of the section Streetwork. In the chapters 4 – 6, there are mentioned results of the enquiry and recommendations to the creation of volunteer conception. In the final chapter of this section, there is introduced a proposal of the conception of volunteerism in the branch Streetwork, which is based on all previous findings and discussion.