

The main objective of this thesis is to describe the issues of liquidation and the liquidator and to find possible solutions of the potential ambiguities of law interpretation. Author presents answers to set research questions about rights and duties of a liquidator and related institutes. The ambition of the work is not to create an exhaustive list of rights and duties of a liquidator but rather bring own inventiveness of the author on this issue. The work is partially focused on regulation of liquidation of capital companies.

Author works with the relevant laws, commentaries and law cases relating to the topic. The thesis is divided into three parts that are devoted to individual examined institutes. The author brings different point of views on the topics through the opinions of relevant experts.

The first chapter, entitled "Liquidation and a liquidator" describes the liquidator, the liquidation and its goal and purpose. It points out to the fact that the liquidator has remained as body of legal entity. In this context, the author relates a large number of rights, especially duties of a liquidator. Significant part of the thesis is devoted to the question of the possibility of filing a request for erasure of a legal person from the relevant register.

The second chapter is devoted to the way of liquidator's performance and also analyzes related institutions, such as due managerial care, information disclosure, personal performance, accountability and liability. Work concludes that most institutes are modified in favor of the purpose of liquidation. The author also explores the link between the liquidator and the concept of "professional care".

The last chapter deals with the partial focus of the thesis on capital companies. Examines the connection of the liquidator to the General Meeting, to the statutory body and marginally to the supervisory body.

The conclusion of the thesis summarizes all findings and interpretative ambiguities of surveyed institutes and presents possible solutions which are suggested by the author in this context.
