

Abstract

Aims: to explore if the consumption of pornography have influence on a relationship, if the consumption of pornography have a negative impact on a first intercourse and on a initial masturbation behavior, to find out if it is a difference between younger and older women in the frequency of pornography consumption, explore if religiosity have some impact on frequency of pornography consumption and one of the aims is to disrupt the myth about primary pornography consumption by men.

Method: the representative data were collected from 413 Slovak women, the data were based on a quota sampling by agency 2muse according to three categories (age, education and address), the sample age was from 18 to 77 years old and average age was 40 years old (SD±14,62).

Results: average age of first pornography consumption is 20,01 years old (SD±7,56), the most interesting age of pornography consumption is 23,44 (SD±9,12). The frequency of pornography consumption is couple of times per year for 107 (25,9%) respondents and most often is watching less than 5 minutes per day. Religiosity has a protective factor of frequency of pornography consumption depending of strengths of religious beliefs and the frequency of implementation of religious requirements. Pornography is not an accelerating factor an initial masturbating behavior and first intercourse. Before the age 18., 196 (47,5%) respondents have consumed pornography, most frequent reason for that was external erotic stimuli at masturbation and watching do not exceed in the age before 18. more than 5 minutes. We found out more than doubly times increase of pornography consumption between younger (from 18 to 34) and older women (55 years old and more). Global satisfaction in the relationship do not affect the frequency of pornography consumption and the age of first exposition to pornography is not a predictor of promiscuous behavior in the past year, or total lifetime and also without prejudice on the number of long-term relationships, whether men or women.

Conclusions: pornography consumption is no longer only a male domain, woman even consume it. Pornography consumption occurs before the age 18 and consumption do not influence the initiation masturbation behavior and first intercourse. Religiosity is a protective factor against pornography and nowadays is increase of pornography consumption between younger and old women.

Key words: pornography, women and pornography consumption, religiosity and pornography, pornography and relationship, pornography consumption before age 18.
