

Abstract

The aim of this bachelor thesis is to define the issue of the registered partnership of homosexuals, including the problems related to the issue, focusing on the Czech Republic. The theoretical part is devoted to homosexuality, followed by registered partnership itself including the process of legislative formation of the registered partnership law and rights and obligations among partners in the Czech Republic. The part also deals with models of registered partnerships in the European Union and the opportunities offered to registered partners in terms of child care. The practical part deals with the processing and evaluation the data, obtained through a questionnaire survey. Chi-square analysis of the independence test for the four-pane table was used in addition to descriptive data analysis. The practical part of the thesis also deals with the data evaluation from the 2011 Population and Housing Census and the data provided by the Gay Initiative web portal.
