

The bachelor thesis deals with distribution methods of operating environments, i.e. operating systems, software and specific configurations. In the thesis, chosen methods (local virtualization, remote software installation, hard drive cloning, cloud computing and remote terminal services) are described. Different distribution methods are evaluated using our own criteria. Four model institutions of different size are considered. Results of the case study are reported in the final part.