

The goal of the submitted thesis is to analyze readers' skills development of the pupils at the first, second and third grades of primary schools taught by the help of analytic and synthetic method, to compare results of this research with the results of my colleague Ms Koničková who realized the same research with the pupils led by genetic method. The important goal is also to reveal difficulties appearing in reading.