

Abstract and key words

My Bachelor's thesis is focusing on the influence of the British domination on the identity of the inhabitants of Hong Kong. In the first part I present the theoretical framework in which I explain key terms such as identity, nation and nationalism. In the second and the third chapter I map British colonialism and the historical development of the Hong Kong's national identity under the British domination. The main part of my thesis focuses on how specifically the influence of British domination was expressed in relation to the national identity of the Hong Kong people. An integral part of my thesis is the relationship between Hong Kong and Mainland China.
