

Abstract

This thesis has several aims. To present daseinsanalysis as a science founded upon philosophy of Martin Heidegger. To show that founding of a science generally requires reflection whether its philosophical foundations are adequate. In contrast to daseinsanalysis prove that contemporary medicine and psychology are founded upon inadequate foundations. And eventually, it will be required to analyze the human body phenomenon, which is problematic, thus posing a threat to the consistence of Heidegger's philosophy.
