

Capability to route can be considered as one of the key features of a modern multipurpose operating system, which HelenOS aims to be. The goal of this master thesis is to explore current HelenOS routing capabilities, enhance them and empower HelenOS with BIRD. HelenOS will become a routing operating system with awareness of its surroundings. It will be capable of dynamic adaptation to changes in the network and their propagation.