The thesis deals with the activities of the Czech Pirate Party in the process of public policy making, focusing on the efforts to promote absolute transparency in the public sector. The topic is relevant in political science and public policy, given the increasing distrust of contemporary Czech politics and digitization of life as well as public administration. The research is important because of its up-to-date and previous minor research. The aim is to find out the contribution of policy analytical capacity in promoting transparency in the Chamber of Deputies. The bachelor thesis is based on the Policy Work, Policy Capacity and Policy Analytical Capacity.
